"let such teach others, who themselves excel." pope

knowledge becomes an obligation . . .
man's duty and devotion to his fellow man . . .

for who can, while knowing, turn
from an unanswered question . . .

a task where
gratification, being abstract,
refuses to console . . .

where labors are not seen as visual heights . . .
but quietly acknowledged by a deeper foundation.

mr. james t. comer

we dedicate

if serving was but a promise and not an action then our college would be built of words.

yet some men rise above talking and begin laying the foundation for progress.

to such a man the gaston college reveleer is privileged to dedicate our 1969 edition.

in contributing time and effort this man asks no more of anyone than he has given of himself.

he has taken time from the daily task that insures his own personal success, and has halted his own progress so that gaston college might grow.

his voluntary donation of hard work provides leadership to the gaston college fund drive, enabling further expansion of a growing, young educational institution.

to you, james t. comer, the student body, faculty, administration and community served by gaston college are humbly grateful for your work, faith and inspiration.

i walk slowly through the darkened halls
filled with the shadows of a busy day
i see happy faces. faces filled with knowledge—of math and
english and the sciences.
faces with companionship reflected
in their shining eyes.

i walk farther and i see young men
fulfilling their dreams of mechanics,
and welding, and computerizing.
i see the success they will someday
be.
i see the beautiful community they
will create.

only a short while ago the last
class ended.
they are the people of today
bettering themselves for tomorrow's world
or tomorrow's jobs.

remember when we first became friends?
there were parties, and dances,
and mystery, and fun.

our first memory was the beauty pageant
the girls were so pretty and you were so modest.

and then came all the dances.
you were in fine style
dressed in your sunday best!

we laughed, and talked and listened together at concerts galore.
and we never thought this year would end.

then you were there for the may court, majestic and quiet.
you must have known then you were dying.

and the day came
when the last spark flickered
and you were no more.
closed, only to open again
at the sight of old friends.

you have nothing to do?
 but my friend, there is so much.
 must you sit there?
 what do you enjoy?
 do you like drama, or literature?
 or maybe engineering
 or brotherhood?
 then join us my friend.
 we'll go our merry way
 and years from now
 we'll have
 our memories.

completion of self rests with development of being—the mind in conjunction with the physical body.
sounds of excitement, roars for victory—
tis not the glory of winnings' sake but the satisfaction of having played the game fairly—
push on for the final goal.
spirit of unity rises to its height as anticipation becomes a cry and not a murmur.
running, jumping, swinging, striking—
push on for the victorious completion.
